

The Miller Place Panther Players

It's a musical-comedy whodunit from the creators of "Chicago" and "Cabaret." That's right, the 2010 MPHS Panther Players production is the Tony Award winning musical, Curtains.

And if you think Curtains is just another musical, you are wrong. It's a backstage murder mystery, quite thrilling in its own way. The show begins with the mysterious death of the leading lady onstage in 1959's Boston Colonial Theater.

In this funny and entertaining who-done-it, everyone is a suspect including the producer, the director, the stage manager, the songwriters, the actors – everybody in the company are under suspicion. The case is handled by a local detective. The detective is an avid theater fan and the idea of investigating in a backstage murder mystery excites him to no end.

As he continues with the investigation, he lets the company carry out their rehearsals. Soon, he finds himself in a vortex of hysterical mayhem where egos clash and the quirky behavior of the stage artists and other people go over his head. And if this was not enough for the detective, there are more murders. Amidst the chaos, there is a blossoming love affair to boot.
